

The year 2020 started with a lot of hopes and challenges. While the commitment to UNSDGs is a decade away, we faced a unique once in a lifetime situation of a global pandemic – Covid-19, that disrupted the order of the world. Today, the world faces a severe and acute public health emergency and an economic downturn. Everyone is making efforts to heal the world with a collaborative approach.

Looking at the triple bottom line - people, planet and profit, while the novel coronavirus is having a devastating effect on people and profit, has it given a short-term silver lining for the Planet? Greenhouse gas emissions are down, and air quality has gone up, as a result of Government lockdowns to combat Covid-19. Data shows that the main cities are recording much lower levels of harmful microscopic particulate matter known as PM 2.5, and of nitrogen dioxide globally with visibly clear blue skies. Taking some examples from India, rivers have become naturally clean, more birds like flamingos are being sighted in cities like Navi Mumbai, more turtle breeding is happening on the Eastern coast of India – all as a result of reduced human intervention. There is a critical need for us to reconsider our consumption patterns and understand the balancing act of nature. Learning from the current situation is that the better we manage nature, the better we manage human health.

Let us pledge to keep the planet protected and work collectively to make the world a better place, creating prosperity and a positive for the people, planet and environment. The Transworld Group Corporate Responsibility Team wishes good health for all. We urge you to stay home, stay safe and maintain social distancing
